

Angharad Davies

Angharad is a highly experienced trial advocate whose practice is focused on Regulatory, Chancery and Employment work.

Her experience extends to representing both Claimants and Defendants from pre-action to trial in common law matters, personal injury and chancery cases including commercial and property disputes, contract disputes, trusts matters and Inheritance Act matters. As well as representing clients in court she also pleads and advises in the full range of matters.

Angharad has a particular interest in Inquests as a result of her Coronial work. She has undertaken a number of sensitive inquests as an advocate concerning deaths at work, RTA's and deaths in hospital. She is experienced in Article 2 inquests and represented the family of the deceased in the highly publicised Inquest arising from an explosion in a firework Store by Lake Windermere in 2016.

She has an extensive employment practice she acts for both Claimants and Respondents. She has been recommended in Legal 500 as a leading employment junior:

Angharad has extensive experience in the EAT and has represented a teacher with Cystic Fibrosis who was dismissed from a York School in breach of the Equality Act.

She is experienced in contentious costs matters. Alongside regular appearances in costs case management and detailed assessment hearings, she advises on a full range of costs issues of all levels of complexity.

Combining her analytical, advisory and advocacy skills with pragmatism and approachability, Angharad ensures that the particular needs of each individual client are met whatever the nature of the litigation involved.
