

David Robinson-Young

David practises mainly in employment and discrimination matters in which he acts for both Claimants and Respondents.

He has advised both large and small employers as well as trade unions providing representation as well as initial advice.

He regularly appears in Employment Tribunals nationwide including Scotland and the Employment Appeals Tribunal.

David has also provided representation for individual employees in internal disciplinary proceedings.

David has been certified by the Bar Council to accept instructions under the Direct Access to the Bar scheme and will happily offer advice in this respect if the circumstances of the case allow.

David is a former police officer and as well as his employment practice he has built up a practice in both criminal prosecution and defence work. He has recently been appointed as a Grade 1 prosecution counsel for the Crown Prosecution Service.

David also undertakes regulatory work, he has successfully defended Nurses against serious allegations brought by their professional body.
