

Frazer McDermott

Frazer joined the Bar in 2004 having spent 16 successful years as a solicitor, advocate and family mediator practising both in the south of England and the north east.

His practice was predominantly family work and he came to the Bar with specialisms in child care, high value ancillary relief work and international child abduction. He was for a number of years a member of the Law Society Children Panel and whilst a solicitor set up a local family mediation service.

Public Law

Since joining Chambers he has built up a busy practice of care work and is regularly instructed by a large number of local authorities, as well as behalf of parents, children's guardians and the Official Solicitor. He is generally regarded as a safe pair of hands and as someone with a high level of client care and empathy. He appears frequently in the Family Court (at both High Court and County Court level) dealing with care and adoption work. He has often appeared in the Court of Appeal. He was described by Munby J in a multi handed care case of significant complexity as 'one of a team of highly dedicated professionals' and as 'skilled, dedicated and caring'.

He deals with cases involving complex medical issues, FII, infants with multiple injuries as well as death, and regularly represents parents with mental health problems.
