Notable Cases

R v WB

Represented the Respondent against an Attorney General's Reference in the Court of Appeal (Criminal Division). The case involved a s.18 offence causing life-threatening injuries. Calum persuaded the Court that the AG's submissions would unduly restrict the role of a sentencing Judge, and that the life-threatening injuries did not require an A1 sentence on the Guidelines.

R v W

Defended a vulnerable 17-year-old Defendant acquitted after trial of rape.
